

Italian DHI Conference 2011

Torino, 11th & 12th of October

More than 180 stakeholders, technicians and modelling experts from the Italian water sector including representatives of national, regional and local water agencies, coastal and port authorities, water utilities, research institutions and universities, professional organizations and engineering companies, met in Turin, Italy to attend the "Italian DHI Conference 2011" on 11th and 12th October 2011.

During the first day many advanced and strategic case studies have been presented by DHI Italy partners and models users, underlining an increasing request for a deterministic, modelling based, approach in many new fields and business areas.

On the second day, many other specific case studies have been presented by Italian users as well as new software developments, during three different sessions dedicated to:

- ♦ Water Resources;
- ♦ Coastal and Marine Engineering;
- ♦ Groundwater.

Key words of Italian DHI Conference 2011:

The 2 days confirmed the primary position of DHI group in Italy, operating as a real partner of many institutional agencies and private companies. Main outcome of the 2 days is a confirmation of how the modelling approach is increasing in importance in all the water and environment related activities.
